Description

DESCRIPTION A late George III mahogany D-end extending dining table in the manner of Robert Adam, comprising a pair of D-end tables and two additional leaves, allowing it to be arranged in a variety of configurations. The table is decorated with a carved frieze incorporating fluting, paterae and draped swags, and stands on square tapering legs carved with husks and terminating in spade feet. The restrained Neoclassical decoration reflects the influence of Robert Adam's designs during the late eighteenth century. With both leaves fitted, the table provides seating for larger gatherings while retaining balanced proportions. The D-end sections may also be used independently as console or side tables when not assembled as a dining table, making it a practical and versatile piece. DIMENSIONS Height: 73cm Width: 269cm (with both leaves fitted) Depth: 115cm CONDITION The table is in good, solid condition and presents well overall. There are minor marks, knocks and scratches consistent with its age and use, and some minor repairs to the carved frieze. The extended sections are secure when fitted, and both additional leaves are present. Overall, it is a well-preserved example, r...
