Description

A substantial early 19th century oak dresser base, offering excellent storage and classic country house appeal. The rectangular plank top sits above an arrangement of three frieze drawers over three graduated dummy central drawers, flanked by two panelled cupboard doors enclosing spacious shelved cupboards. Retaining its attractive brass swan neck handles, pierced escutcheons. The cupboard doors retain their original sliding block lock mechanism. The dresser is constructed in solid oak throughout and displays a rich warm colour with a lovely aged patina. A practical and handsome piece, equally suited to a kitchen, dining room or hallway. Item Reference: M-6957C . Dimensions: Height – 86.5cm / Width – 161cm / Depth – 50cm CONDITION REPORT: Good antique condition, displaying the expected wear associated with over 200 years of use. The solid oak top has surface marks, small historic knocks, shrinkage splits and evidence of long-term use, all adding to its authentic character. The brass swan neck handles and pierced escutcheons appear to be later replacements in keeping with the period, while the cupboard doors retain their original sliding block locking mechanism.
