Description

An Anglo Indian Hoshiarpur table The removable brass tray with a rope twist edge, geometric embossed border around a scalloped center. Stands on an octagonal folding hardwood base with latticework sides with carved lotus flower center, the 8 sides in 4 alternating patterns. Note some losses to the carving in places. The base is hinged and folds flat. Indian, circa 1900 These portable folding tables were designed to take tea, or refreshment. Trays of this form from India take the name Benares, a British colloquial name for the city of Varanasi in India, which was famed for metalware and the making of beautiful decorated trays. H: 24" (61cm), Di: 31" (79cm)
