Description

Fine Thomas Kent Pelham R.A (1831-1907) Spanish Genre Village Oil Painting Brief Description: This is an exceptionally fine original 19th-century Oil on Canvas Painting attributed to the Royal Academy-listed British artist Thomas Kent Pelham (1831–1907). The outstanding composition depicts an enchanting Spanish street scene, where a small group of local townspeople gather beneath the archway of a historic building. At the heart of the scene, two elegantly dressed ladies carrying a water jug are engaged in conversation with a handsome young gentleman, accompanied by his hardworking donkey. Interestingly, this charismatic figure appears in several of Pelham's other known compositions, adding further interest to the work. Executed with remarkable skill, the painting displays an exceptional level of detail throughout. The rich, vibrant colours remain beautifully preserved, while the canvas is perfectly taut. The work presents in immaculate condition, making it an outstanding example of the artist's genre paintings. The painting is housed within a substantial and highly complementary 19th-century-style gilt moulded frame, enhancing its impressive presentation. It is read...
