Description

Watercolour and bodycolour on paper Image size: 12 x 8 inches (30.5 x 20.25 cm) Handmade Pre-Raphaelite style frame In this pastoral scene, the sky is portrayed with twisting clouds, suggesting the onset of a summer storm. On the right-hand side of the painting, dotted across a field sheep and their lambs create an idyllic backdrop to the stormy scene. In the foreground, a little boy, looking visibly frightened, tries to climb on to his mother who is balancing a basket of freshly gathered eggs. To their left a small scruffy dog accompanies the figures. Behind them, a winding stream meanders off into the distance, adding depth to the landscape. This scene is imbued with a luminous quality, where the vibrant oranges and electric greens create a striking and energetic contrast. This work is a study for the painting that is displayed in the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne. Frederick Walker RWS Frederick Walker, an esteemed British social realist painter and illustrator, Frederick Walker, was hailed by Sir John Everett Millais as the greatest artist of the century. Born into a family of eight children, Walker's father was a jeweller and his grandfather an artist who h...
