Description

Oil on board Image Size: 8 1/2 x 10 1/2 inches (21.6 x 26.7 cm) Gilt frame This humorous painting captures the artists perspective of 'A long Day' with a man asleep on the train as he commutes in and out of the city, with the obscured face the artist suggests an anonymity to the man who is one of many making the daily journey. On the back of the frame is an exhibition label from the late The Phoenix Gallery in Lavenham, which opened in Suffolk in 1952 by Ronald McCausland-White (1908-1980) which held many important exhibitions. Many of the artists the gallery promoted were eminent Royal Academicians of their day.
