The cupboard is of elegant architectural form, with a moulded cornice above a pair of bowfront panelled doors opening to shelved storage. The lower section is enclosed by a further pair of matching panelled doors, providing generous storage throughout. The cupboard is veneered in richly coloured mahogany with delicate boxwood line inlay framing the doors and panels. Its attractive bowfront profile gives it a softer appearance than the more commonly encountered straight-front corner cupboards, while the substantial double-height design makes it an impressive yet practical piece for a period or contemporary interior. The upper section retains a working key. A good example of late Georgian furniture, offering excellent storage and decorative appeal.
