Description

I know I am always saying it, but another "first for me" (quite a few already this year)....this is an early 18thc sycamore pedestal dairy / kitchen bowl....the shallow dairy bowl sits upon a raised pedestal base, all turned out of one piece of sycamore....it shows evidence of careful use with shallow knife marks across the bowl....always pleasing to see, as it shows it has "had a life".....the natural colour is very good, as is the overall condition....it is decorated with triple incised line decoration....and I love the pole-lathe marks clearly visible on the underside of the base.....and as my mentor use to say to me forty years ago...."it is a belter boy" and that sums it up perfectly...! English. C1720-40.
