Description

A beautifully aged 17th-century oak court cupboard with bold carving and a practical, early domestic layout. The upper frieze shows shaped, foliate carving and three compartments, the central door studded with initials that hint at its original household. Below are two drawers with turned knobs and paneled cupboard doors offering generous storage. Richly patinated and full of period presence, it's a solid, substantial example of early oak furniture — decorative, characterful and immensely practical. Internal reference : SAI4253
