Description

A fine and rare Derby porcelain blue and white hand painted cream / sauce tureen and cover, of lobed quatrefoil shape. The knob formed as a cherry and moulded leaves and stem. A charming Chinoiserie design with an ornate scene of a pagoda set on a shoreline, surrounded by stylised trees and shrubs with phoenix type birds in the sky. Both sides with the same design and intersected on the short sides with sprays of peonies. Matching peony sprays decorate the cover and a single peony also inside the base. Both rims edged with a cell border. Unmarked, c.1768. Reference: Ceramics Of Derbyshire, Bradley, entry 205 for a tureen of this shape and design. It measures 16.5cm (6 1/2") by 13.7cm (5 3/8") wide and 11.2cm (4 1/2") high. In excellent condition with just a couple of minor points: the tip of one side of the cherry stem knob has been lost and two small nibble chips to the rim of the tureen. A small firing fault to the edge of the cover where the glaze didn't take but it was decorated with the cell border so it is more felt than seen. This area is closely photographed. No other damage, repair or restoration and minimal handling wear. Some areas of the cell border on the...
