Description

A characterful early 20th century office or machinist's chair, featuring a solid timber frame with a revolving seat and adjustable tilting backrest mechanism. Raised on a sturdy four-legged base with shaped supports, the chair retains its industrial charm while offering practical comfort. The seat and back are upholstered in black leatherette with decorative studded borders, making it a striking piece for a home office, workshop or industrial-inspired interior. Item Reference: M-6984 . Dimensions: Height – 91cm / Width – 41cm / Depth – 49cm / Seat Height - 46cm . CONDITION REPORT: Overall, the chair is in good condition and is solid and sturdy throughout. The revolving seat turns smoothly, and the tilting back mechanism functions as intended. There is light age-related wear to the timber frame, together with minor marks and scuffs consistent with years of use. The upholstery remains in good order with only light signs of age, and the chair presents very well overall with an attractive patina.
