Description

A beautiful solid oak dressing chest with an elegant triple mirror, dating from the 1920s–1930s. This timeless piece combines generous storage with classic British craftsmanship, making it equally suitable as a bedroom dressing table or an impressive hallway statement piece. The dressing chest features two spacious drawers fitted with original brass drop handles, while the large central mirror is complemented by two adjustable side mirrors, allowing the angle to be changed for practical everyday use. The warm oak grain, restrained detailing and balanced proportions give this piece an understated elegance that works beautifully in both traditional and contemporary interiors. Overall height with mirror 162 cm Very good antique condition. The cabinet is solid, sturdy and ready for use. The mirrors are in good vintage condition with only light age-related wear, while the oak has developed a rich, warm patina over many decades. Minor marks consistent with age add authenticity and character without detracting from its appearance.
