Description

We are delighted to have acquired and offer this beautiful portrait miniature pendant in the manner of Andrew Plimer (British 1763-1837) c.1800. The frame is made from antique 14ct gold and the reverse side features a wonderful deep blue guilloché glass accent with a central cartouche locket. Most strikingly, the portrait itself has been painted with such a beautiful touch, with particular attention to delicate skin tones, shadows and proportions. Her majestic hair, almost complementing and blending with the background clouds immediately draws one's attention to the centre. Her face is depicted with fantastic detail and care, light blue eyes with a natural gaze and a slight raise in the brows that convey subtle emotions and vitality. Apparent upon first glance, a rosy blush on either cheek, complementing her youth and vibrancy, yet it is perhaps the sensitive use of fine shadows around the corner of the lips, nose and eyes that offer an air of further sophistication and depth besides superficial beauty. The quality of the frame itself is equally impressive with a beautiful, understated plain mirror finish on the gold surface, aesthetically pleasing and unostentatiously...
