Description

DESCRIPTION An elegant and unusual pair of 18th century marquetry inlaid corner tables, richly decorated with finely executed floral marquetry incorporating classical urns, scrolling foliage and exotic birds. Each table retains its pierced brass gallery above a matching pierced frieze and stands on three elegant tapering legs. Unlike many examples, the decoration continues around all exposed sides, allowing them to be displayed either against a wall or free-standing within a room. The warm honey-coloured timber and intricate marquetry combine to create a particularly decorative pair, equally suited to use as occasional tables, lamp tables or hall furniture. DIMENSIONS Height: 76.5cm Width: 54cm Depth: 38cm CONDITION These tables display the honest wear expected from furniture approaching 250 years old. There are age-related marks, knocks and surface scratches together with some minor losses to the marquetry. The pierced brass galleries have small breaks, minor losses and areas where they have lifted slightly from the timber supports. One of the square floral paterae to the top has been replaced with a plain timber section, and part of one carved sunflower ornament is mi...
