Description

A highly decorative William IV rosewood work table, featuring an elegant caddy top above beautifully carved sunburst panels, raised on a turned centre column and quatreform base terminating in bun feet. This attractive piece displays the rich colour and striking grain associated with quality rosewood furniture of the William IV period. The caddy top is adorned with impressive sunburst carving and opens to reveal a useful storage compartment, originally intended for sewing and work accessories but equally suitable today for jewellery, keepsakes, letters, or other personal items. The elegant turned pedestal is richly carved and stands upon a shaped quatreform base with bun feet, providing both stability and visual appeal. The decorative carving continues throughout the piece, creating an attractive appearance from every angle. Combining practicality with distinctive period design, this is a charming and unusual example of William IV furniture that would make an excellent addition to a sitting room, bedroom, study, or hallway. Features William IV period Rosewood construction Decorative caddy top Beautiful sunburst carved panels Useful internal storage compartment Turned...
