Description

A charming solid mahogany Georgian tripod wine table, the circular richly figured tilt-top set over a turned stem, all raised on a sweeping tripod base of cabriole legs terminating in scroll feet. The timber retains a rich, glowing patina with over two centuries of honest domestic character, complemented by historic, long-stabilised repairs around the leg junctions and a top that remains remarkably level and firm when locked flat. Very good antique condition, with lots of beautiful surface wear and solid historic repairs to the base. Structurally sound, stable and ready to place in the home. English, circa 1780.
