Description

A handsome 18th-century oak refectory table with a wonderfully honest, time-worn character. The thick two-plank top shows superb patina, natural grain movement, and the gentle undulations created by centuries of use. Beneath, robust square legs with carved detail and a shaped apron are united by a strong stretcher, giving the table excellent stability and presence. A true country house piece with all the hallmarks of 18th-century craftsmanship — tactile, architectural, and beautifully aged. Internal reference : SAI4262
