Description

Antique 20th century Edwardian hall stand in oak, a beautifully designed piece that combines traditional craftsmanship with everyday practicality. Very well made and of good quality, it offers an elegant solution for organising a hallway while adding plenty of period character. The hall stand is supported by striking barley twist columns and features a raised gallery to the top, enhancing its impressive appearance. A useful central drawer, retaining its original knob handle, provides convenient storage for smaller everyday items, while the umbrella compartments on either side offer ample space for umbrellas, walking sticks or canes. The oak displays a rich, warm colour with attractive natural grain throughout, complementing the quality of the construction and decorative detailing. Its well-balanced proportions and classic Edwardian styling make it a highly desirable piece that will suit both period and contemporary homes. Presented in good condition, this handsome Edwardian hall stand is as practical as it is attractive. A fine example of quality furniture, it would make a welcoming addition to any entrance hall or reception area while bringing timeless charm to its surroundings.
