Description

Stunning Quality Late 18th-Century George III Partners Pedestal Desk Lovely Colour and Patina – England, circa 1790 A superb late 18th-century George III period partners pedestal desk in solid mahogany, of outstanding quality and presence. This impressive desk offers no fewer than eighteen oak-lined drawers (nine on each side) providing generous, well organised storage. The top retains its original tooled and embossed brown leather writing surface, framed by a classic thumb moulded mahogany edge. Below, two substantial pedestals each contain four drawers with their original brass fret plate handles, all raised on a plinth base with concealed castors for ease of movement. In excellent original condition, the desk displays a glorious, rich mahogany colour and a warm, mellow patina developed over more than two centuries, echoed by the characterful surface of the leather. Finished all round, it is designed to stand freely in a room, making it ideal as a true partners desk and allowing flexible placement within an interior. The proportions, detailing and overall integrity of the piece clearly reflect the skill of the Georgian cabinetmaker and the careful stewardship it ...
