Description

A fine quality 19th century Regency style mahogany sofa table of diminutive proportions, featuring a well figure rectangular top with a further flap at each end. This is positioned over one long drawer and one false drawer with brass drop handles. Further raised on square end supports with elegant high stretcher and four sabre legs terminating on original brass castors. Functional as well as elegant, this charming table is of useful size. Constructed from fine quality mahogany timber it features one elongated deep drawer and a further false drawer to the reverse. Sofa tables such as this were popular throughout the 18th and 19th centuries and as their name suggests they were originally designed to sit near to a sofa. The size of this piece means that it would sit equally well in the the centre of a room without dominating it, or it could work early well against a wall as an occasional table with a pair of small lamps. Dimensions: W76cm x D71cm (closed) W122cm (open) Height of table top from floor 73cm
