Description

An exceptionally charming 19th-century French wrought iron garden daybed. Featuring an elegantly curved, ergonomic silhouette, the piece is defined by its intricate scrollwork frame, and twisted iron detailing. The bed base is constructed from flexible iron straps supported by tension springs to offer comfortable suspension. The ironwork exhibits a wonderful, naturally aged rust patina accrued over decades, giving it immense character. It comes complete with a bespoke tufted, soft-hued striped fabric cushion in muted tones of terracotta, gold, and cream. Handed stuffed with carded white lambswool, to add comfort and usability to a wonderful, interesting antique sun lounger. Condition: Offered in strong, structurally sound antique condition. The iron frame retains a natural rust patina consistent with age and outdoor exposure. Measurements: Length 189cm x Height 56cm x Width 64cm (approx.) Wool has long been accepted as an environmentally positive fibre choice with a number of benefits, such as being 100% natural, renewable, biodegradable and recyclable. We are increasingly aware of our climate impact and are putting this at the heart of our approach, which affe...
