Description

A highly decorative and substantial oversized wing armchair, dating from circa 1930 and inspired by the elegant proportions of the Georgian period. Upholstered in aged leather with a rich, attractive patina, this impressive chair combines comfort, scale, and timeless design. The chair stands on plain square moulded legs united by matching stretchers, providing both strength and visual balance. Its generous proportions, distinctive winged back, and well-executed detailing make it an exceptional statement piece, ideally suited to a prominent position in a drawing room, library, study, or reception area. The original leather upholstery remains in very good condition, displaying the characterful wear and patina expected from age and use. Structurally, the chair is excellent, with a solid and sturdy frame throughout. Condition: Excellent structural condition. Very solid construction. Original leather upholstery in very good condition. Attractive age-related wear and patina consistent with age. Dimensions: Height: 127 cm. Width: 102 cm. Depth: 100 cm. A handsome and impressive George III-style wing chair, offering both decorative presence and practical comfort.
