Description

A striking 19th century Anglo-Indian carved hardwood chair with a decorative pierced back. The tall back is profusely carved with repeating floral roundels, scrolling foliage and geometric openwork, surmounted by an ornate cresting with a deeply carved central rosette. Spiral twist uprights terminate in carved finials, while the front legs are carved with further detail and retain the original brass and ceramic castors. The seat has a serpentine front rail and is upholstered in a pink floral damask fabric finished with a pink border. The frame displays crisp, well-executed carving throughout, with decoration continuing to the seat rails, legs and uprights. Item Reference: M-7002 . Dimensions: Height - 109cm/ Width - 49cm/ Depth - 57cm / Seat Height - 41cm . CONDITION REPORT: Overall in good antique condition. The frame is structurally solid and sound with age-related surface wear, minor marks and rubbing consistent with age and use. The upholstery is clean and serviceable with some general wear and fading commensurate with age. The original castors remain present and are in working order.
