Description

Antique 19th century carved Gothic style side table in oak, a striking piece that showcases the bold character and decorative appeal of Gothic Revival furniture. Very well made and of good quality, this handsome table combines practical storage with an abundance of finely executed carved detail, making it an impressive addition to any period or traditional interior. The table is fitted with two drawers to the front, both retaining their original decorative brass handles and offering useful storage for a variety of household items. Every aspect of the piece reflects the quality of its design, with beautifully carved decoration throughout displaying an exceptional attention to detail. Raised on sturdy square legs united by a supporting stretcher, the table has a strong and well-balanced stance while maintaining elegant proportions. The oak has matured beautifully over the years, displaying gorgeous natural grain and a rich, warm colour that enhances the depth of the carved decoration. The combination of quality construction, intricate detailing and attractive proportions makes this a particularly desirable example of 19th century Gothic Revival furniture. Presented in good...
