Description

A beautiful pair of antique Regency Revival dining chairs dating from the late Victorian to Edwardian period, circa 1890–1910. Crafted from solid mahogany, these elegant chairs feature graceful sabre back legs, shaped top rails and finely carved central splats with decorative rosette motifs. Inspired by the refined designs of the Regency era, the chairs combine elegant proportions with excellent craftsmanship. The warm mahogany grain contrasts beautifully with the soft salmon-pink upholstery, creating a timeless look that would complement both traditional and contemporary interiors. The frames are strong and sturdy, with attractive turned front legs and a wonderfully rich patina developed over more than a century. The upholstered seats remain in very good condition and provide comfortable everyday seating. Seat height: 45 cm. Perfect for use as dining chairs, occasional chairs in a hallway or bedroom, or as decorative accent pieces in a period home. Very good antique condition, with only minor signs of age and use consistent with their history. Solid frames and clean upholstery.
