Description

Large late C19th polychrome-decorated four-fold 'country-house' canvas screen or room divider, in the manner of C18th Dutch tooled leather. Tall and wide hinged and folding four-panel arch-top screen with elaborate floral rococo-style raised bright polychrome decoration. Each fold having 3 panels divided by embossed bands and corresponding bound edges. The obverse side having an ebonised wooden frame and a black background with hand-painted floral sprig decoration. Highly decorative screen in imitation of a scarce C18th Dutch embossed and tooled leather screen, for use perhaps as a room-divider, privacy or draught screen or alternatively mounted flat against a wall to provide decorative a panelling feature. In generally excellent 'country-house' condition, having only minor splits and repairs to the panels commensurate with age, use and purpose. H 86" W (full) 110" D 2" England or Low Countries c.1870
