Description

A charming and highly collectable original child's club armchair, dating from the Art Deco period circa 1930. This piece perfectly captures the iconic Art Deco silhouette with its high, straight back, deep seat, and wide boxy armrests. The chair retains its original oxblood/burgundy red faux leather (leatherette) fabric upholstery from the period. It features wonderful, authentic details including a fully studded front border made of decorative brass upholstery tacks. The chair is raised on low-profile, dark-stained wooden block feet, cleverly concealing small underlying metal castors that allow it to be effortlessly moved. An incredibly decorative, nostalgic piece of children's nursery furniture that would also make an excellent shop display accent or statement addition to an eclectic home interior. Presented in very good, sturdy antique condition. The frame remains completely structurally sound. The original faux leather upholstery shows honest, age-appropriate signs of wear, including fine surface cracking and light creasing to the seat cushion, alongside minor scuffs to the leading edge of the armrests, all adding to its genuine character.
