Description

Frank William Scarbrough 1863-1945. London artist who settled in London 1908. He painted mainly in watercolours often taking as his subject matter the busy shipping in the Pool of London where ocean going liners battled with soot grimed tugs and barges in the busy waters of the Thames. On other occasions he painted quiet atmospheric pictures, often done in the late afternoon when he captured the different reflections on the water in places such as Whitby Harbour. He belonged to that group of Edwardian artists who worked until the 1930s and include such well known marine artists as Charles Napier Hemy, William Lionel Wyllie and Charles Dixon. 'Morning Port of London' signed watercolour, inscribed with title, image size 34x51.5 cms, framed size 42.5x60 cms
