Description

Antique 19th century Victorian writing table in pine, a charming and practical piece that showcases the honest craftsmanship and timeless appeal of the Victorian period. With its elegant proportions and versatile design, it is equally suited for use as a writing desk, console table or occasional table. The table is fitted with two drawers to the front, each retaining its decorative brass handles and providing useful storage for stationery and everyday essentials. It stands on beautifully turned legs fitted with their original brass and porcelain castors, allowing the table to be moved with ease while preserving its authentic period features. The pine has developed a rich, warm patina over the years, highlighting the beautiful natural grain and character of the timber. Its construction and understated elegance make it a highly desirable example that will complement both period and modern interiors. Presented in good condition, this attractive Victorian writing table offers a wonderful combination of style, functionality and original character. A delightful piece of antique furniture, it would make a superb addition to any home.
