Description

A spectacular vintage diamond cocktail ring with wonderful presence and an unmistakably glamorous 1970s design. Crafted in 18ct white gold and hallmarked in London for 1977, this striking ring features an elaborate circular cluster of diamonds arranged across an intricate openwork setting. The diamonds have a combined weight of approximately 1.40 carats and are individually claw set at varying heights, creating a beautifully structured, almost floral arrangement. A central diamond cluster forms the focal point, surrounded by further diamonds in an abundant layered composition. The open framework allows light to move through the setting, enhancing the sparkle while giving the substantial design an elegant, airy quality. Viewed from the side, the elevated gallery reveals the craftsmanship behind the ring, with the diamond settings supported by an architectural openwork structure. The polished white gold complements the diamonds beautifully and gives the piece a sophisticated monochromatic finish. Dating from 1977, this is an authentic vintage jewel with all the statement appeal of the era. At 10.6 grams, it has a reassuringly substantial feel and would make a fabulous occas...
