Description

Regency Style Twin Pillar Dining Table – Recycled Georgian Mahogany, circa 1910 A handsome Regency style twin pillar dining table, made by a skilled cabinetmaker circa 1910, with a beautifully figured mahogany top displaying the rich colour and character of earlier Georgian timber. This impressive early 20th-century dining table is particularly interesting because the cabinetmaker recycled Georgian timber, which was plentiful at the time and considered superior to much of the newly available timber. The use of well-seasoned Georgian mahogany gives the tabletop exceptional depth of colour, grain and patina, with a character that is difficult to reproduce in later timber. The table follows the elegant Regency twin pillar dining table tradition, with two substantial pedestal supports and gracefully swept legs beneath. The warm, highly figured mahogany top has softly rounded corners, giving the table a refined appearance while making it practical for comfortable dining. A 54cm (21 1/4in) removable leaf allows the table to be extended when additional seating is required. It measures 156cm (61 1/2in) closed and extends to an impressive 210cm (82 3/4in) with the leaf in place. A...
