Description

Overview A remarkable antique Welsh oak Cwpwrdd Tridarn prominently dated 1743, displaying the monumental proportions, architectural construction and deeply aged surface associated with important early Welsh vernacular furniture. Traditionally translated as a three-part cupboard, the Cwpwrdd Tridarn is one of the most recognisable forms of Welsh country furniture, particularly associated with North Wales. Combining open display areas with enclosed storage, these substantial cupboards were designed as both practical household furniture and highly visible statements of status and craftsmanship. Key Features Antique Welsh Cwpwrdd Tridarn Prominently dated 1743 18th-century Welsh vernacular furniture Predominantly oak construction Traditional three-part cupboard form Bold moulded upper cornice Open upper display section Panelled back Turned supporting columns Applied shield bearing initials and date Multiple panelled cupboards Two lower drawers Strongly shaped fielded panels Rich naturally developed oak surface Exceptional historic character and patina Craftsmanship & Detail The cupboard is arranged across three clearly defined architectural stages.
