Description

A pair of late Victorian mahogany bedside chests dating from the late 19th century, each fitted with three generously sized drawers and standing on attractive shaped bracket feet. Originally adapted from larger pieces of Victorian furniture, these chests have been thoughtfully converted to create an exceptionally practical pair of bedside cabinets. Their clean, understated design allows the beautiful mahogany grain and rich warm colour to take centre stage, making them equally suited to both period and contemporary interiors. Each chest is fitted with three smooth-running drawers offering useful storage, complemented by brass oval drop handles that enhance their classic appearance. The tops provide ample space for bedside lamps or decorative accessories, while the compact proportions make them ideal for bedrooms where storage is at a premium. Presented in good antique condition with a pleasing mellow patina and the expected minor marks and wear associated with age and use. The adaptation has been sympathetically carried out, resulting in a sturdy and attractive pair ready for everyday use.
