Description

This is an antique drop leaf ladies work table. An English, mahogany sewing or writing table, dating to the Regency period, circa 1820. Beautifully appointed sewing table with wonderful Regency craftsmanship. Displaying a desirable aged patina and in good order. Superb stocks show excellent grain interest throughout. Rich caramel hues beam beneath a wax polish finish. Drop leaf top extends usefully, supported by articulated flying arms. Fascinating writing drawer, with fold out leather skiver and pen box. Duo of drawers upon the front aspect, with a single and double height drawer box. Faux drawer fascia to the reverse affords central room placement. Ebonised circular pulls adorn each fascia along with inset brass locks — untested, key absent. Sliding wool bag with champagne coloured silk cotton situated to the lower edge. Of deep proportion, the wool bag being tastefully lined with a quality blush pink baize. Standing upon pairs of long, graceful legs with a turned stretcher uniting each side. The table riding smoothly upon a quartet of articulated brass castors. This is a delightful antique drop leaf ladies work table, with striking appointment and a suite of useful features for...
