Description

A charming George III mahogany two-tier occasional table, dating to circa 1780, of particularly useful proportions and good warm colour. The table has two graduated circular tiers, each with a finely moulded raised edge, the upper tier supported on a turned central column. The lower tier is raised on a turned baluster stem above a shaped tripod base terminating in elegant cabriole legs and pad feet. Standing 71cm high, this is an especially practical example, making it ideal for use as a side table or lamp table beside a sofa or armchair, whilst the two tiers provide useful additional display or storage space. A very attractive and versatile piece of late 18th-century Georgian furniture, with pleasing proportions and a lovely mellow mahogany colour. English, circa 1780.
