Description

An elegant and decorative set of eight mahogany dining chairs, including two carvers and six side chairs, made in the Hepplewhite taste and dating to the first half of the 20th century. The finely shaped shield backs incorporate particularly attractive pierced lyre splats, with carved foliate decoration and delicate vertical strings. The serpentine-fronted drop-in seats are upholstered in a neutral fabric, making them easily adaptable to a variety of interiors. The chairs are raised on slender reeded and tapering front legs, giving the set a light and refined appearance, while the two carvers have gracefully shaped open arms. A very attractive and practical set of eight dining chairs, drawing strongly on the elegant designs of the late 18th century and particularly well suited to a Georgian or traditional dining room. Seat Height 47cm English, circa 1930.
