Description

A striking pair of large temple jars decorated on a deep black ground with richly detailed scenes of birds, flowering branches, rocks, and foliage. Each lid is topped with a sculpted guardian lion resting a paw on a ball — a traditional emblem of protection and good fortune. One lid has a small chip, clearly shown in the photographs, though this does not affect stability or presentation. Generous in scale and vibrant in colour, this pair showcases the artistry and symbolism of East Asian ceramic design and makes a strong decorative statement. Internal Reference: SAI4238
