Date of manufacture: 17th Century

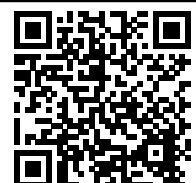

Description

A late 17th-century English oak chest of drawers of attractive proportions and excellent original colour. Arranged as three tiers of drawers: bold geometric pattern. Each drawer fitted with brass drop handles and matching keyhole escutcheons. The chest has a deep, mellow original colour and rich surface patina. All timbers are original, including the solid top and the back boards, which remain in their honest, unrestored condition. It stands on its block feet with a base moulding. Smooth running drawers. A lovely, unspoilt example of late 17th century oak furniture – full of character, with a warm, deep colour that has built up naturally over the centuries. 77cm wide x 53cm depth x 77cm high
