Description

A 19th-century fire-resisting safe in deep black paint with brass fittings, including a plaque for James Bruce, Agent, 36 West Nile Street, Glasgow, and a circular escutcheon marked Wrought Iron Fire Resisting Safe. The interior is tidy and practical, with a main compartment and a lower lockable drawer retaining its original brass pull. The main door key is present and working; the drawer key is missing. A striking and functional piece of Victorian security engineering with strong provenance and decorative appeal.
