Description

A fine Regency Maltese Patience table in olive and satinwood veneers. Maltese Made furniture became highly desirable and fashionable around the early 1990s following the release of the book by Joe Gallia Naudi titled 'Antique Maltese furniture' which extolled the virtues and beauty of it. Since then it has remained incredibly popular, boosted of course by the fact that there is not a huge amount of Maltese furniture found on the market. Generally it can be identified through a variety of different features including but not limited to the use of fabulously attractive olive wood veneers and the inlay of a Maltese cross or sometimes a similar star in the table top. Very often the secondary material and craftsmanship will also be of significantly inferior quality to what you would find on a similar piece made in one of the grander European cities of the time simply due to the availability and the skill of the local cabinet makers. We are almost certain that this pretty little table is Maltese in origin and dates to the early 19th century it is fabulously useful little size and incredibly elegant perhaps down to the simplicity of the design. Height 29" 74cm Height max 40.5"...
