Description

An exceptional eighteenth-century English two-tier cricket table, also known as a pub or tavern table. The circular top is made from oak planks, worn smooth with age and showing a rich, original patina from years of honest use. Below sits a matching lower shelf, supported by four turned spindles, perfect for tankards or storage. It stands on three chunky, baluster-turned legs with bulbous feet, giving it that classic three-legged stance. A lovely piece of vernacular country furniture with wonderful character. The table is totally correct and original with minimal repairs.
