Description

An Extremely Fine and Very Important 17th Century Japanese Lacquer Cabinet on French Giltwood Stand of Regence Period circa 1680-1690 Provenance Likely acquired by Herman Willem Daendels (1762-1818) Mr. Herman August Daendels (1918-2000), Amsterdam Eurasia Antiques, Amsterdam Biennale des Antiquaires, Paris, 1998 Private Collection, Belgium Kollenburg Antiquairs, Oirschot-chosen for the press release for the Art Affair Fair, Amsterdam, in 2020, Also taken to TEFAF Maastricht A Private European collection This fine Japanese lacquer cabinet or 'Cantoor' was presumably originally acquired by a French connoisseur due to the French Regence period base it sit upon. The craze for lacquer in the west from the 16th century onwards has been extensively documented and it is generally accepted that the finest of all lacquers, technically speaking, were those produced in Japan rather than China. This cabinet is one of the best examples of Japanese export lacquer. The lacquer work on the cabinet, executed in a variety of techniques including Maki-e, is exquisite and survives in amazing condition. The front depicts a landscape with mountains, temples, trees and a river with ...
