Description

Albert Clark British, (1843-1928) Dappled Buckskin Horse in a Stable Oil on canvas, signed Image size: 19 inches x 22.75 inches Size including frame: 24 inches x 27.75 inches A fine sporting horse portrait of a dappled buckskin horse in a stable by Albert Clark. A stallion can be seen standing side on facing left in a straw filled stable. He is posed with his head turned slightly towards the viewer to reveal a white blaze down his face. To the far left, a blanket with the initial 'H' is shown draped over a feeding trough. The striking coat colour of the horse and bobbed tail indicate he was most likely used as a carriage or riding horse. Albert Clark was born on 29 October 1843 in Hoxton London into the Clark family of artists. His father was the animal painter James Lawrence Clark (1812-1909) and his mother was Elizabeth London. His brothers Samuel James Clark (1841-1928), Octavius Thomas Clark (1850-1921) and half-brother James Albert Clark (1863-1955) all became artists. Two of his children Frederick Albert Clark (1869-1954) and William Albert Clark (1880-1963) also inherited the Clark talent for painting. Given the similarity in style and subject matter, it is high...
