Description

A beautiful antique English oak gateleg dining table, dating from approximately the 1920s–1930s and displaying the distinctive characteristics of the Jacobean Revival period. Crafted in oak, the table has developed a wonderful warm colour and natural patina. The substantial top displays particularly attractive grain and figuring, giving the piece plenty of character. Width fully open: 134 cm. Presented in very good antique condition, with a strong and stable construction. As expected from a genuine antique piece of this age, there are some minor marks, variations in colour and signs of previous use, all contributing to its authentic character and patina.
