Description

As part of our Japanese works of art collection we are delighted to offer this large scale Edo Period (1603-1867) circa 1710, Arita Jardiniere. This increasingly scarce survivor from the early 1700's period is decorated throughout in typical Imari palette, the complex flared body gives rise to an overlapping top rim, the exterior of the Jardiniere vibrantly decorated in traditional blue, orange and gilt enamels of native flora interspersed with red and blue concentric banding, the top rim decorated with opposing bands of chrysanthemum. The interior rim of the bowl has been further decorated with sprigs of trailing prunus and roses, whilst the interior base is decorated with a floral scene including grey and yellow enamels, despite its intended use the internal enamels remain vibrant. An increasingly scarce perfect example of Japanese porcelain from the early 1700's period, remaining as functional for use today as it was when manufactured in the kilns of Arita, some 300 years ago. Condition report : Perfect unrestored body with minor expected enamel wear. Approximate Sizes : Diameter : 14 1/4" 36 cm Height : 9 3/4" 25 cm Free fully insured worldwide delivery and...
