Description

A fine and rare English porcelain set comprising a saucer, teacup, and coffee cup, dating to circa 1811–1820, pattern number 2/132 from the John Rose period. Each piece is richly decorated with a deep dark royal blue ground, and three beautifully hand painted panels depicting delicately detailed white roses with stems and foliage, framed by finely executed foliate gilding. The cups are particularly impressive for their internal decoration, a considerably more difficult and skilful technique than traditional external decoration. The set is a fine example of early 19th century English porcelain craftsmanship, combining intricate floral painting, richly applied gilding, and a striking cobalt blue ground. All three pieces are in good condition, with no restoration. Measurements: Saucer: Height 3 cm; Width 15 cm; Depth 15 cm Teacup: Height 6 cm; Width 11.5 cm; Depth 9 cm Coffee Cup: Height 7.5 cm; Width 9.5 cm; Depth 7.5 cm Further photographs are available.
