Description

A fine Victorian burr walnut oval loo table, circa 1870, with a particularly attractive quarter-veneered and book-matched burr walnut top displaying richly figured grain and warm colour. The moulded edge sits above a plain burr walnut frieze. The tilting top is raised on an impressive carved and turned central column, terminating in a substantial quadriform base with four boldly swept legs. The base is enriched with carved foliate decoration and scroll details, the legs terminating in carved feet with porcelain castors. A handsome and highly decorative example, the superb figuring of the burr walnut being especially striking. The tilting mechanism allows the top to be raised vertically when not in use, making it both an attractive centre table and a practical piece for a period or traditional interior.
