Description

This is an antique ladies hobby table. An English, rosewood drop leaf sewing or parlour table, dating to the William IV period, circa 1835. Fascinatingly appointed sewing table with wonderful William IV craftsmanship. Displaying a desirable aged patina and in good order. Superb stocks show excellent grain interest throughout. Warm caramel hues beam beneath a wax polish finish. Drop leaf top extends usefully, supported by articulated flying arms. Front drawer dressed with circular brass drop handles. Drawer fascia and wool box dressed with inset brass lined locks — untested, key absent. Interior offers a sliding divider tray, which can also be removed if required. Faux drawer fascia to the reverse affords central room placement. Sliding wool box accentuated with silk cotton upholstery in green and champagne hues. Darling pattern with silk cotton flowerheads catch the light beautifully. The pleasingly clean interior offering a generous storage space of 24cm (9.5"). Support stand crafted in a U-shaped surround to the wool box. Column accentuated in relief with a superb acanthus and collar carving. Circular drum base hosts exquisite hairy paw feet of deep undulations. The whole riding ...
