Description

This is a scarce Georgian, English, double handled jelly glass dating from the second half of the 18th century, c1770. The glass is in excellent condition for its age. This means, of course, that it shows age related wear and tear to the rim of the foot consistent with some 250 years of use. It has a rough pontil mark on the underside of the foot. The glass has a bell-shaped bowl measuring 7.4 cm (3 inches) in diameter at the upper rim. The bowl is plain and sits directly on a domed foot which measures 6 cm (2.4 inches) in diameter. The glass is 11 cm (4.4 inches) in height and measures 11.8 cm (4.7 inches) across the extremities of the two applied handles. The handles were first affixed to the top of the bowl and then finished off at the bottom with well made curlicues. There are no chips, cracks, significant scratches or any obvious evidence of restoration. There is some very light water staining to the bowl. It is made from lead metal weighing 165 g. (~ 6 oz.).
