Description

Georgian Portrait Lady Lucy Montagu Circle Of John Vanderbank Early 18th-century British aristocratic portrait, circa 1730-1740, traditionally identified as Lady Lucy North, Lady Guilford, nee Montagu, and catalogued by Dreweatts as Circle of John Vanderbank (1694-1739). The sitter is portrayed bust-length within an oval wearing a black gown enriched with crimson and white ornament and an elaborate pearl and feather headdress. Lucy Montagu married Francis North in 1728. Their son Frederick North, Lord North, later became Prime Minister of Great Britain and led the government through much of the American War of Independence. The Vanderbank Connection Of particular significance, John Vanderbank painted Lucy's widower Francis North in 1736. The signed and dated portrait survives in the National Trust collection, establishing a direct connection between Vanderbank and Lucy's immediate family. A larger three-quarter-length portrait traditionally identified as Lucy and likewise catalogued as Circle of John Vanderbank was sold at Christie's London on 11 July 2008, Lot 56. Importantly, Christie's recorded that portrait as having descended through the Earls of Guilford. Chr...
